

Couple Moving Mattress Catches Toddler in 3-Story Fall

It was moving day. Konrad and Jennifer were moving to a new apartment. There was just one problem when they were moving out of their old apartment. They were stuck in their elevator for 30 minutes. The elevator was fixed. Konrad and Jennifer were fine. They continued moving.

Konrad and Jennifer arrived at their new building. The first piece of furniture they chose to move into their new apartment was their mattress. Mattresses are difficult to move - so they wanted to move it first.

While carrying the mattress to their new building they heard a scream. They looked up and saw something very scary!

They saw a toddler hanging from a third-story window. The child was dangling on a television cable!

Konrad and Jennifer acted quickly. They placed the mattress under the window just before the boy fell. The mattress broke the child's fall. The boy was terrified but he was safe. If he had landed on the pavement, he would have died.

What if Konrad and Jennifer did not get stuck in the elevator?

What do you think?