

Bus Driver Buys All Passengers A Lemonade

John Lohan is a bus driver. On a hot summer day, he was driving on his route. John spotted a kids' lemonade stand on the sidewalk. He was thirsty and wanted a nice cool glass of lemonade.

He was slightly ahead of schedule. This means he had a little extra time. He also had seven passengers on the bus with him.

John asked his passengers if it was OK to stop at the lemonade stand. He said that he would buy them all a lemonade. They loved the idea. It was free lemonade!

John stopped his bus in front of the lemonade stand. He hopped off—then on—then off again. He brought a cold glass of lemonade to all the passengers.

It took about 90 seconds to get the lemonade. That's about the same as waiting at a red light.

None of the passengers were upset. It was just a slight delay. And they got a delicious lemonade! The passengers were all grinning from ear to ear.

Eight glasses of lemonade costs $4.00. $0.50 each. John paid the lemonade stand kids $10.00. That's a nice tip!

John made everyone happy that day! And he got his cool glass of lemonade.

What a nice random act of kindness! Well done John!

Do you want to drink lemonade now?

Did you ever do a random act of kindness?

Did you ever receive a random act of kindness?