

Woman Drops Wedding Rings Into Donation Pot

A woman dropped two rings into a Salvation Army kettle and told the workers to give them away.

The unknown woman dropped the rings into a kettle at a Walmart along with a letter.

"Perhaps the Salvation Army knows of a couple wishing to make a commitment - for life - to each other. If so, please give these rings to that special young man for his bride," the note read.

A local jeweler verified the rings were real and worth about $500.

A Salvation Army spokeswoman told a reporter that they didn't know anyone, so they've decided to run a contest for the rings and a free wedding on Valentine's Day.

Have you ever been to a church?
Do you believe in God?