

Pilot's Sandwich Delays Flight

A New York-bound flight was delayed for more than two hours. Why? Because the pilot was waiting for a sandwich to be delivered!

The Flight Captain for Pakistan International Airlines, had a long flight ahead of him. When he learned that the only foods on the airplane were peanuts, chips, and cookies, he got upset.

The captain wanted better food. He said he needed a sandwich, at any cost. The closest sandwich shop was in a hotel in Lahore. They told the captain that it could take as long as two hours to deliver the sandwich.

The captain decided to wait.

The flight was scheduled to leave Lahore at 6:45 a.m. The plane was ready to take off at 6:45 a.m., but the captain wasn't going to take off without his sandwich!

The flight finally left Lahore at 9:15 a.m. The captain's hunger caused a two and a half hour delay!

Pakistan International Airlines is investigating the incident. The captain might get in trouble for causing the delay. But should they ask a pilot to fly on an empty stomach?

What do you think of this pilot?