

Inmate With Toothache Escapes From Prison

A 51-year-old Swedish prisoner broke out of prison. He broke out because he had a toothache and wanted to go the dentist.

He went to the dentist and had his tooth treated. Then he turned himself into police after leaving the dentist's office. The police promptly returned him to the prison.

Surprisingly, the prisoner was scheduled to be released the next day!

The man spoke with newspaper reporters. He said that he had been complaining to prison officials about the pain for four days. He finally broke out because he couldn't stand the pain anymore.